¹ I used a very comprehensive definition of home economics that includes family studies (family science) and human ecology in Canada. For me, home ec is family studies (dynamics and relations); child studies, youth and human development; clothing and textiles (apparel, fashion and design); consumer studies; housing; foods, nutrition and dietetics; and teacher education. For this overview, I excluded marketing, hospitality and real estate programs in business departments that often contain consumer behaviour courses with a commercial focus.
